This training is available to all personnel participating in the Health Literacy Tarrant County grant project.

Designed to train library staff in providing consumer health information to patrons. Attendees will be able to identify and address health information questions, access and use reliable health websites, and refer patrons to United Way Live Well chronic disease self-management programs.

Topics and learning opportunities from this training include:

- Health literacy and its implications
- Practical and ethical guidelines for health information reference interviews
- Identifying health information needs
- Identifying, accessing, and obtaining reliable health information
- United Way Live Well programs and 2-1-1 Outreach Services
- Patron referrals to local chronic disease self-management programs

“Building the Bridge” Instructor:

Andi Spencer, MLS is the Outreach Librarian at the UNT Health Science Center in Fort Worth. As the National Library of Medicine representative for North-Central Texas, she serves as the primary health information resource navigator for consumers, health professionals, and librarians in 28 Texas counties. Ms. Spencer works with NTLP to provide instruction in the use of NLM biomedical, clinical, and patient education databases, and assists community based organizations in identifying and applying for National Library of Medicine grants and funding opportunities.

This training is provided in fulfillment of the Health Literacy in Tarrant County Adults grant from the United Way of Tarrant County.
